Series of Raids on Nanking

Back Into Laps of British Officials

SHANGHAI, Oct. 13.—(INS)—With Anglo-Japanese tension high as a result of yesterday's attack on British Embassy automobiles by Nipponese planes, Japan's air force unleashed a new series of raids today on Shanghai and Nanking.

At the same time, other Japanese aircraft zoomed over densely populated native quarters of the city, dropping leaflets urging the populace to surrender because "resistance is useless."

The aerial bombardment of Shanghai, supported by a brisk artillery barrage, was carried out systematically against Chinese defense positions in the Chapel and Kiangnan sectors. The new attack began at dawn and was still progressing at a late hour today.

The raid at Nanking, followed a series levelled against the capital yesterday, was carried out during the morning.

The leaflets dropped by the Japanese offered one dollar to every deserter from the Chinese armies. Commenting on this, a Japanese spokesman said:

"We shall soon be getting ready to hand out two million dollars."

TOKYO, Oct. 13.—(INS)—Blame for the incident in which six Japanese war planes machine-gunned three British Embassy automobiles south of Shanghai yesterday was tossed back into the laps of British officials by Japanese authorities today.

A spokesman for the Japanese Foreign Office said investigation of the attack is under way but stated Japanese reports that the automobiles failed to bear distinctive marks of their nationality and were "following the wrong route" were to a "very great extent accurate."

British authorities in China yesterday claimed the automobiles carried Union Jacks which could be seen from thousands of feet in the air, and that Japanese officials had been notified of the proposed trip 48 hours in advance.

Bomb Fragment in International Settlement

Shanghai, Oct. 13.—A two foot fragment of red hot rail flung by a Japanese bomb from the north station in Chapel, landed a mile away today in the center of the international settlement business district, imbedding itself in the street.

It did not harm anyone, but it stood as a warning against things to come, just as the Japanese attack on the British embassy motor convoy yesterday was interpreted by many foreign officers as well as the Chinese as another experiment by the Japanese.

Nippon's naval planes were responsible for the assault on the British embassy automobile and many circles here believed the attack was carried out to learn the strength of British resistance. They view the aerial attack in which British ambassador Sir Hugh Knatchbull-Hugessen was wounded by a Japanese bullet in a similar light.

Exasperation Unconcealed

London, Oct. 13.—Attempts by the Japanese, who blame the British themselves for yesterday's attack by Japanese planes on three British Embassy automobiles in China, brought unconcealed exasperation in British government circles today.

Officials made it plain they were hurt nearly to the point of apoplexy by what they called the "off-hand Japanese manner in dealing with incidents involving British."

Reception Tendered To Teachers At Makefield

YARDLEY, Oct. 13.—With Carl F. Ogren, president of Makefield Parent-Teacher Association, in charge, the first meeting of the year was held in the Makefield school. This was an informal reception to the teachers.

Future projects to be planned are: a Halloween party for children of Makefield and Edgewood schools, and a Fall Arbor Day tree planting.

Arrangements have also been made for participation in the meeting and pageant of the County Council in Doylestown, October 29th.

Friends Fete Miss Baur
At A Pleasing Shower

Friends of Miss Dorothea Baur, Hayes street, surprised her Thursday evening with a shower in honor of her forthcoming wedding. The Misses Mary and Margaret McCahan, Hayes street, were hostesses. Guests arriving at the Baur residence were delighted to find a cardboard bride, in full wedding attire, standing in a corner of the room. Her bouquet was comprised of handkerchief calla-lilies, a tab in each bloom telling where the gifts were hidden. The handkerchiefs were given to the donors. Games were played, and refreshments served.

Those attending: the Misses Irene and Minnie VanSoest, Mrs. William Groff, Mrs. Andrew Pollett, Mrs. Wayne Fahringer and daughter Joan, Mr. and Mrs. Mathias Baur, Mrs. Mildred Morse, Mrs. Leslie Rodgers, Mrs. Dorothy Rodgers; the Misses Doris Wilkison, Olive Whyatt, Viola Smedburg, Catherine Bauer, Dorothea Baur, Mary Margaret McCahan.

SEVEN KILLED; 115 HURT
ON COUNTY HIGHWAYS*Bucks County Ranks Fourth
In State in Fatal Accident
Record*GIVES STATE STATISTICS

There were seven killed and 115 injured in automobile accidents in Bucks County during August. This makes the county stand fourth among the 67 in the state in the number killed and 13th in the number injured.

Pennsylvania's automobile death rate stood at 25.8 for the first eight months of 1937.

This figure was slightly less than earlier in the year but everything indicated that this year's rate would remain higher than the all time high of 25.0 established last year.

Figures tabulated for August set the rate for that month alone at 22.8 deaths per 100,000 population computed on an annual basis. Highest preceding month of the year was January which had a death rate of 37.2. Lowest rate was 20.4 which occurred in May.

During August 6,820 accidents, which resulted in 182 deaths and 6,065 injuries, were reported.

"In 1935 there were 1887 persons killed and 48,398 injured in automobile accidents in this state," Secretary Boardman said.

"In 1936 there were 2411 killed and 59,854 injured.

"In 1937, up and until the 5th day of October, there were 1942 persons killed and 41,280 injured.

"If we continue at the same rate that now characterizes our motor vehicle disasters, by the end of the current year there will have been 2590 persons killed and 58,140 injured on the highways of this Commonwealth."

Thirty-eight cities went through the month without a single fatality. These cities were Alliquippa, Allentown, Amersburg, Bethlehem, Dunmore, Duquesne, Easton, Harrisburg, Hazleton, Jomestead, Johnstown, Kingston, Lancaster, Lebanon, McKeesport, Monessen, New Castle, Norristown, Oil City, Pottsville, Shamokin, Sharon, Shenandoah, Uniontown, Upper Darby, Wilkes-Barre, Wilkingsburg and Williamsport.

Sixteen counties reported no automobile fatalities during August. The death free counties were Carbon, Clarion, Clinton, Forrest, Fulton, Greene, Jefferson, Lehigh, Lycoming, Northumberland, Perry, Pike, Potter, Sullivan, Susquehanna and Wyoming.

DEVELOPMENT OF DU PONT COMPANY FROM TIME

Paper at Meeting of Historical Society

The paragraphs herewith given formed a paper read by Dr. B. F. Fackenthal, Jr., Riegelsville, at the meeting last Saturday of Bucks County Historical Society at Walnut Grove Farms. The title of the paper is "The DuPonts Selecting a Site for Their Powder Works."

By DR. B. F. FACKENTHAL, Jr.,
Riegelsville, Pa.

A letter in the library of the Bucks County Historical Society, from Joseph Erwin of Erwinna, Bucks County, Pa., to George Wall, Jr. (1) bearing date September 10, 1801, sets forth that a Mr. Du Pont had examined locations on several streams in New Jersey, including the Musconetcong, which has for its source the overflow of Lake Hopatcong and empties into the Delaware river at Riegelsville, New Jersey, opposite my home at Riegelsville, Pa., with the view of locating a powder manufacturing plant in America. They finally selected a location on the Brandywine creek at Wilmington, Delaware, where they built their first plant during the following year, 1802.

This was the beginning of what is now the extensive works of E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Company. This firm has wisely perpetuated the name of its founder, E. I. Du Pont de Nemours, a town on the Seine in Northern France.

At first, and for many years, their business was confined exclusively to the manufacture of black powder, in a small and unpretentious building, a remnant of which is shown herewith.

From this small beginning the company has grown and developed from year to year along diversified chemical lines, until now its powder output, as distinct from its industrial explosives-manufacture, and its other chemical developments, amounts to but one per cent of its entire business.

The annual report of this company for the year 1936, shows assets of over 721 million dollars ($721,000,000), with 53,000 employees, and compensation of $72,000,000.

One of the outstanding features, that has led to their expansion and success is due to their research bureau. The following is taken from the Erwin letter referred to:

"... A few days ago Mr. De Nollies made my neighbor, Mr. Prevost a visit (2) he was accompanied by Mr. Du Pont, formerly consul at Charleston for the French Republic. (3) This gentleman engaged in his own country in the manufacture of Gunpowder in works upon an extensive Scale, and proposes to make an establishment of the same kind in this Country. Mr. Du Pont viewed several streams in Jersey, the Musconetcong (Musconetcong) &c."

"I was not fully acquainted with his object or I should have offered him mine, (at Erwinna, opposite Frenchtown). Mr. Prevost, however intends to write to him on the subject.

The Keystone Automobile Club's Safety Test Trailer will be in Bristol tomorrow and all motorists are invited to take the tests.

The "laboratory on wheels" is the Keystone Automobile Club's latest contribution to the cause of highway safety. With the inauguration of the Safety Test Trailer the Club broadens the scope of its practical activity against the rising toll of highway casualties.

Edward B. Watson, manager of the Bucks county division of the club, announced today the trailer will be stationed in front of the office of Leonard Blanche, 118 Mill street, Keystone's Bristol representative.

Principal object of the tests is to insure highway safety by acquainting motorists with their driving limitations. "Good driving judgment," said Mr. Watson, "is largely the result of knowing what you can and cannot do under various conditions while operating an automobile. Devices in the Safety Test Trailer duplicate certain emergency situations on the road and the result of the tests will determine in what particulars, if any, the driver under examination is weak. The motorist who knows his limitations is in position to protect himself by exercising unusual care to compensate for his weaknesses."

The examination, which is free, includes a vigilance test, a mental reaction test, a steering skill test, glare test, color vision test, field of vision test and a stereoscopic test.

Tomorrow at noon and tomorrow evening the trailer will be at the Elks' Home, during the meetings of the Rotary and Exchange clubs.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS*By FRANK R. KENT
(Copyright, 1937, by The Baltimore Sun)The Major Is "Fed Up"

THERE IS A curious lack of co-ordination among labor leader allies of the Administration which is confusing to the President's friends and annoying to his legislative advisers. This is particularly evidenced in the matter of the Wage and Hour Control bill for which Mr. Roosevelt claims to have a "mandate" from the people, but which, despite that claim, a tired and irritated Congress let fail at the last session.

FROM THE political standpoint, the enactment of this measure early next year is deemed very desirable, the expectation being that it will form the basis for most of the New Deal propaganda in the 1938 campaign. Nothing so well lends itself to slogans of the "More Pay and Less Work" type, and the publicity bureaus are all geared to use it as an illustration of the noble way in which Mr. Roosevelt has sternly compelled unscrupulous employers to cease grinding their labor "beyond human endurance" and pay a "living wage."

THERE IS A large percentage of buncombe in the Administration ballyhoo on this subject, but it fits in perfectly with the New Deal style of demagoguery and there was keen White House disappointment at the manner in which the bill was kicked around last session. Had it not been for the demoralization of Administration forces following the collapse of the court-packing proposals, a more determined effort to jam it through would have been made. That in either extra or regular session it will be on the "must" list is clearly understood. Recent developments, however, indicate that it certainly will not go through as originally drawn by the Messrs. Corcoran and Cohen, sponsored by the President and presented to Congress. This was made clear the other day in the speech of that voluble and ardent friend of the working man, Major George Berry, now Senator

Meeting*(By Staff Correspondent)

EDDINGTON, Oct. 13.—Farm folk from Bucks and Philadelphia counties had their day yesterday when more than 100 farmers and their friends met at St. Francis Industrial School here for their 12th annual community meeting. Included in the program, which began at four p. m., were moving pictures, farm exhibits, puppet show, a modelling show for the women and important talks by agricultural authorities.

Charles E. Potter, Agriculturist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, who talked on "Rural Youth," told the audience that "I do not know of any organization in the United States that has done as much for rural America as the 4-H Club program."

The second address of the evening session, "Keeping Our Soil in Place," by Frank G. Bamer, Extension Agronomist of the Pennsylvania State College, dealt with the problem of soil erosion on the farm. Mr. Bamer said that "the soil is our basic heritage, but we must guard and protect it and find means to keep it from sliding away."

Miss Lila Lee Riddell, Home Economics Extension Representative of Philadelphia County, showed the audience how one ensemble could be made into 20 variations. She modelled each variation for the group. Miss Riddell told the assemblage that "while it may be only partially true that dress makes the man, it is certainly true that dress makes the woman."

Mr. Potter, in his talk on "Rural Youth," explained his chief job of supervising 4-H club work in 12 Eastern States. He stated that 4-H work is the junior part of the Extension Service.

Tracing the history of the growth of this movement, the symbol of which stands for "head, heart, hand, and health," Potter told the audience that the program was begun in 1914 and that since that more than six million boys and girls have been associated in 4-H work.

"It is the largest organization of rural youth in America," Potter pointed out. "There are local leaders for each club, as well as county agent leaders and State college leaders."

"There isn't room on the farm for all the boys that grow up on farms, but there is still room for that boy who really likes farm work. Only one boy out of three who is raised on a farm will stay there."

Potter summed up his talk to the group, which included approximately 100 boys from the Industrial School, by stating, "There are big opportunities for the boy who wants to stay on the farm. But he must be sure he will not mind long hours, that he will like his job out in the open, and that he will not be afraid of hard work. There is a real challenge to the boy and girl and 4-H Club work is helping them to meet that challenge."

Mr. Bamer, in his talk on soil erosion, told the farmers that in 1910 there were 10 million acres of worthless land in the United States, while today there are over 35 million acres of worthless land.

"The loss annually, due to soil erosion, is estimated at more than 400 million dollars."

"Many farms all over Pennsylvania and the United States are growing poorer every year because of this wasting away of the soil."

"Runaway soil does not grow crops, and runaway soil does not put money in our pockets," Bamer said.

The speaker told the group that there are two kinds of erosion, the first of which, geological erosion, is not very important. The second type, man-made erosion, however, constitutes a serious problem to the farmer. Wind and water both play an important part in this erosion, but in Pennsylvania

WHAT FACTS DO

Facts, when permitted to occupy the place they should have in all contentions are apt to have a sobering effect upon fair-minded men.

It will be noted that the chairman of the national board of mediation had this significant comment to make as he announced an agreement between the railroads and representatives of 250,000 employees: "The spirit in which the two sides to the controversy receded from their original positions as facts were developed was the biggest factor in the settlement."

That means that an agreement by which a great strike has been averted and a compromised basis set up for future operation is the result not of heated threats and ballyhooed contentions, but of calm study of actual needs of employees on the one side and of the ability of a great but depressed industry to meet those needs. The country is spared the disturbance of a labor battle which would have done it no good. The railroads take upon themselves the added burden of a payroll increased by $35,000,000 a year. The employees benefit to that extent.

Some day, when government comes to the conclusion that responsibilities must rest equally upon both capital and labor and that the welfare of the nation is always at stake when settlements of disputes are sought through force and violence, it will set up for capital and labor in all fields those processes of conciliation and mediation which have for many years saved the country from the disastrous effect of widespread railroad strikes.

PIES IN THE ABSTRACT

Scientists who have just announced that you can't have apple pie and vitamins, too, failed in the abstraction of their science to reckon with the ingenuity and appetites of apple pie eaters the country over.

That apple pie retains only twenty per cent of the C vitamin contained in the original apple is no deterrent to pie eaters. Any vitamin eater who likes his pie will merely eat five times as much.

Leftovers also get a punch in the refrigerator—or whatever may be the most vulnerable spot for leftovers—from the scientists who contend that by the time apple pie has reached the midnight snack state its vitamin content is down to ten per cent. But who has ever heard of any self-respecting apple pie, at all worthy of the name, reaching the midnight snack status?

Despite the official nature of the research, skeptics may be pardoned for doubting the merit of the conclusion. Ignored completely is the question of how early a pie baker must get up to produce a good apple pie for breakfast and the scientists are strangely silent on how many pies they consumed during the inquiry.

Possibly they were so busy enjoying the first pies they forgot to count the vitamins, and later so full of pie they couldn't.

The fellow who wrote about the silent watches of the night never tried to sleep with a dollar one on the dresser.

The question is if you owned America and nobody else lived here, could you make more than you do now?

The illiterate in some states are being taught to sign their names. Now if somebody would do that for the educated.

"Beauty's A Charm" by HARRIET HINSDALE

CHAPTER I

IN the stores on the Main Street of the sleepy little Louisiana town, the hours from twelve to two were rarely desecrated by the activities of trade. Only one place of business showed signs of life. Here there was someone who did not observe the unwritten law that no work be done during the sacred siesta hours.

Under a large sign which read: "DIXON'S SERVICE STATION AND GARAGE TOWING DAY OR NIGHT. REPAIRS OF ALL KINDS," a young man was busy with the lubrication of an ancient car.

He was a tall, rather raw-boned youth whose irregular features were redeemed by gray eyes of unusual steadfastness and an expression of open-hearted friendliness.

So far as appearances went, Clyde Dixon might have been the only living person in Carterton. But Clyde moved about briskly and whistled cheerfully, quite as though he enjoyed the work he was doing on an engine which most mechanics would have consigned to the scrap heap.

Suddenly he stopped whistling and lifted his head, for he had caught the sound of an approaching automobile coming down the turnpike, the road which after curving around the Dixon Service Station became from then on the Main Street of Carterton.

Clyde came forward, wiping his hands on a piece of waste, for he knew that the approaching car had just crossed the little white bridge which spanned the creek, a short distance up the road. In a moment a smart red roadster came around the clump of live oaks at the bend and, slowing down, stopped before him. The driver pushed his expensive Panama hat back on his head and leaned out.

"Hey, Buddy," he said. "Know where the Carters live?"

"I reckon you mean Mr. Wakefield Carter, don't you, Mister? You passed the place about a mile up the road. Big, red brick house it is, setting back from the turnpike quite a bit. With white pillars in front. And roses climbing over the gate posts."

"You mean that moth-eaten mansion with the shingles coming off the roof and the fence half down? Must have been a great old plantation house in its day."

"Yes, sir," Clyde exclaimed emphatically. "It sure was! Why Rosebud used to have over twenty-five hundred acres, I've heard tell. The Carter family was among the wealthiest people around here in those days. How about a little gas, Mister?"

"Sure, fill 'er up. And check the oil, will you, Old Timer?"

Clyde wondered who the stranger inquiring for the Carters might be. Talked like a Northerner. Just another salesman, probably, going to try to sell Mrs. Carter some new kind of beauty fixing. She was always writing away for samples of skin lotions or hair tonic, or face cream or powders, or something.

"There you are, Mister," Clyde announced. "That sure is a swell sounding motor you got."

"Not bad," the other agreed, getting into the car again and handing Clyde some change. "You must be something of an expert on engines, judging from the books you've got lined up there." He nodded smilingly toward a small row of technical looking volumes on a shelf inside the glass-fronted service station office. "Don't see many of you lads reading that stuff."

Clyde grinned. "Been tinkering with motors ever since I was knee high to a hop toad. When I hear one running good it sure is sweet music to my ears. Thanks, Mister. Come again," he called after the departing roadster.

He was certain now that the friendly stranger was a salesman, for in the car he had noticed a large box labelled "BLOOM-OF-YOUTH COSMETICS." Well, he thought, as he turned back to his work, he would of doves, the only sound to break the stillness.

The stranger pulled the old-fashioned bell and, after a wait of some moments a stout colored woman with a fresh gingham apron about her ample waist stood in the doorway.

"Yes, sah," she said, smiling expansively.

"Is this where Miss Pearl Carter lives?" asked the newcomer with an answering smile.

"Miz Chatah? Yes, sah! She done live here. Won't you all step inside and res' yo'self?" The ser-find out all about it tonight when he saw Lucy Lee. His smile became beatific.

Lucy Lee Carter. It was a pretty name. But Lucy Lee Dixon was a whole lot prettier. He had decided that long ago. Soon as she was eighteen he was going to ask her to change it. He couldn't remember the time when he had not loved Lucy Lee. It was just as natural as breathing or eating or sleeping. Life wouldn't be life, without Lucy Lee. So sang something in Clyde's soul as he whistled and tinkered and whistled again in the warm May sunshine.

The stranger stopped his glistening red roadster before a rickety gateway whose rotting pillars seemed to be sustained by a wealth of tangled rose vines. The gate itself had long since gone the way of all decrepit gates, leaving free access to the house through an avenue of tall, stately cedar trees which towered darkly green against the blue of the cloudless sky.

The stranger strode up the flagged walk toward the fine old house, which had the appearance of some proud and dignified aristocrat fallen upon lean and hungry days. On one side there was a picturesque octagonal brick tower, the pigeonhole of an earlier period, with high peaked roof surmounted by a rusty weather vane. From it came the soft cooing engaged in what he called "Foreign Trade," as a matter of fact he was pirateering, and on July 30, 1778, he was proscribed by proclamation and attainted of treason. He did not marry. His body lies buried in the Erwin Private Burying Ground, near Erwinna. (See Bucks County Historical Society, Vol. V, page 426.)

George Wall, Jr., Esq., lived at Lumberville, Bucks County, Pa., where he operated sawmills. He was commissioner of Forfeited Estates during the Revolutionary war. He was also a commissioner for clearing the Delaware river for navigation.

(2) During the French Revolution of 1792, Paul Henry Mallet Prevost a republican, joined the French army at Alsace as Commissary General, but he not approving of some of the extreme measures was proscribed, and with his secretary, Nicholas Toulaine de Fremoy, escaped into Germany and came to America, landing in Philadelphia, as did other Huguenots.

On December 4, 1794 he bought 568 acres of land in Hunterdon County, N. J. on the Delaware river, part of which is now occupied by the borough of Frenchtown, so named by reason of this French settlement.

General Prevost's tomb in the Frenchtown cemetery records that he was a native of Geneva, Switzerland, born in 1756, died January 5, 1835. His wife (Jeanne Elizabeth Patry) and other members of his family also lie buried in the Frenchtown cemetery.

Mr. S. M. Prevost, long a vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, was a member of this family. (See History of Hunterdon County, page 405.)

(3) A letter from Mr. L. Du Pont, president of E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Company, says: "No doubt the gentleman visiting Mr. Prevost, was Mr. Du Pont, as the dates correspond with the period during which he was trying to secure a site for the powder works which he contemplated building." * * * "The final selection of the site, near Wilmington, Delaware, was not only on account of its suitability, but also affected by the fact that local people appeared willing to supply capital."

A letter from Hon. Cordell Hull, Secretary of State at Washington, D. C., bearing date June 19, 1937, says that it was Citizen Victor Du Pont who was Consul for the French Republic of France at Charlestown, S. C. Exequatur dated June 10, 1796. Mr. Charles K. Weston, director of the publicity department of the E. I. DuPont de Nemours & Co., advises that Victor Du Pont was a brother of E. I. Du Pont, and was therefore the gentleman who visited Mr. Prevost at Frenchtown, N. J.

THE HIGHLAND FUNERAL

Your calls must go through... regardless!

MID-STREAM in a muddy river, a huge dredge accidentally hooks a big submarine cable. Snap!... and the long distance telephone lines between two states are severed.

Away out in the country, a roadside barn is fired by lightning and a toll cable beside it melts in two.

Down the road a heavy truck skids into a telephone pole and important inter-city circuits are torn apart.

A stray rifle bullet hits a telephone cable and a dozen families are cut out of service.

Such hazards are all in the day's work to us — just part of the telephone job. We expect them to happen... but never know when or where they will.

The important thing is that these troubles shall not affect your end of telephone service. Your calls must go through—regardless. And to make sure that they do, we must be ready for any emergency any time... ready with men, machines and equipment to prevent trouble before it happens or to fix it FAST when it does.

And so... when you meet emergencies, you can turn to the telephone with confidence. It's the quick, easy, economical way to get help in a hurry. You can depend on it.

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Oct. 13—In observance of their 25th wedding anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. Jenks Wessaw entertained in Red Men's Hall, Saturday evening, approximately 80 guests.
Mr. Wessaw and his wife, the former Mary Stockert, were presented with numerous gifts, as mementoes of the occasion.

Decorations of the hall were in keeping with the Halloween season, and bouquets of cut flowers were used in profusion. Favors were small baskets of candy.

An orchestra provided music for dancing, and cards, other games and music were much enjoyed. A repast was served at the conclusion of the evening's entertainment.

The Great Game of Politics

from Tennessee, who, addressing the A. F. L. convention in Denver, declared himself strongly against having in the bill any provision for a Government board or bureau "to regulate either the unions or the conduct of business." The Major further alleged that he is for "a simple law" and is "all fed up on bureaus in Washington to fix wages and hours."

AS A BOARD to do exactly that thing is the heart and soul of the Corcoran-Cohen bill for which the President has asked, the attitude of Major Berry in "bawling out" the regulatory boards is, to say the least, surprising. It is true that the Major is not as important in labor circles as Mr. Lewis, or even Mr. Sydney Hillman, now a fair-haired favorite of the White House, and that both of them are for the regulatory board. But the Major is a recognized leader just the same. Moreover, he was the chief speaker at the A. F. of L. convention and is, besides, a member of the Senate, where he is supposed to be "labor's spokesman." Clearly his declaration on labor legislation is not lightly to be dismissed, even though it may be—and is—exceedingly irritating not only to the Messrs. Cohen and Corcoran but also to the Messrs. Lewis and Hillman, who not long ago lunched the Major out of his headship in Labor's Nonpartisan League, from which position statements gushed from him like water from a fountain.

THE TRUTH IS the Major's stand against the proposed board in the bill is of real significance. It is possible the President may put pressure upon the Major and compel him to "do an Ashurst," eat his words and fall in line. On the other hand, it may be that the President may conclude that the only way to get any bill through is to drop the board altogether and have, as the Major urges, "just a simple bill." It is a fact, of course, that the immense powers given the board in the bill constituted its most offensive feature, aroused the most violent opposition and created the gravest doubts as to its constitutionality. As against these objections the framers of the bill insisted that without the board there would be no bill, which makes the Berry position even more interesting. His is the first labor cry to be raised against it. Perhaps, as some suggest, the Major, who loves the sound of the human voice when uttered by himself, did not quite grasp the full implications of his own words. Time will tell.

G-MEN SEND PUBLIC ENEMIES NO. 1 AND 2 TO GLORY

The bodies of Al Brady, Indiana's contribution to the underworld and better known recently as Public Enemy No. 1; and his killer, Clarence Lee Shaffer, lie in the street in Bangor, Maine, after G-men waylaid and shot the fugitives. The two members of the "New Dillinger Mob" were mowed down as they were about to enter a hardware store and replenish their supply of ammunition.

DEAN DETTON PINS DUSEK TO THE MAT

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 13.—It took Dean Detton, No. 1 challenger for the heavyweight wrestling crown, just 23 minutes and 50 seconds to dispose of Rudy Dusek, eldest of the famous wrestling family, in the feature bout at the Arena last night.

Detton employed a punishing leg hold to bring about Dusek's downfall. Dean, up until the time of the fall, had Rudy more or less at his mercy from frequent applications of his famous leg hold. Rudy, a master of the art of grunt and groan, met his master and he did not take it generously.

The crowd, apparently unaccustomed to the finer arts employed in a real wrestling match, voiced its disapproval on several occasions. The slam bang tactics employed in the preliminary bouts had keyed the audience to such a pitch that anything short of a broken leg in the windup was dull entertainment.

Karl Davis, the burly Texan, won his second match in as many weeks when he flattened George Kondylas after 19 minutes. Kondylas, sporting a pair of handlebars on his upper lip, was on the receiving end of repeated forearm blows. George entered the ring with his left ribs neatly bandaged, and Karl used this as a target for his stoutest punches. Kondylas was felled on several occasions.

The crowd's ire, however, hit a peak in the second bout. Rebel Rob Russell, a newcomer to the Arena, was the bad man on this occasion. Russell met Sammy Menacher, a youngster in the art of wrestling, and treated the latter to a nice beating. Russell employed most of the holds that are either barred from wrestling or have no place in the game. Russell's triumph was anything but to the crowd's liking.

A 30-minute draw in the opener set the scene for a lively evening. Abe Kashey and Jack Kennedy provided the entertainment in this set-to and had the crowd in an uproar throughout.

YARDLEY SPORTSMEN REORGANIZE ASSOCIATION

YARDLEY, Oct. 13.—The Yardley Fish and Game Association reorganized at a special session, at which time, Algernon S. Cadwallader was elected president, with Harry S. Delaney, vice-president, and William J. Mackensen, Jr., as secretary-treasurer.

The president appointed the following committees: Membership, George P. Brown, Herman Westerman, Carlton R. Leedom; game, Norman, Tallman, Harry Delaney and William J. Mackensen, Jr.; fish, Willet Carver, Malcolm Carver and Carlton R. Leedom; entertainment, F. J. Wolfe and O. S. Penman; publicity, F. J. Wolfe.

The guest speaker was District Warden L. B. Stackhouse, Morrisville, who talked on the new game laws and re-creating of game in this territory.

A drive will be made for members and under the reorganization it is hoped that the club will function to the benefit of the sportsmen in this area.

Delegates to attend the county federation were Harry Delaney, Norman Tallman and William J. Mackensen, Jr. The members were asked to not shoot quail in this area this season. This club will have ten deputies to assist the game warden during the hunting season.

Meetings will be held the first and third Tuesdays in each month in the municipal building.

Tells Farmers of Soil Erosion And of 4-H Club Work

sylvania the erosion by water is the more serious.

"There are two types of water erosion," Bamer explained, "the first being the gully type and the second known as sheet erosion. This second type is not easily seen but every year many tons of fine top soil are moved because of it."

"Sheet erosion, because it steals the soil so evenly is very hard to detect, but is really the biggest problem for Pennsylvania farmers."

"There are two methods to prevent this erosion. One is by mechanical means, such as dams of all descriptions and brush terraces. The second is through the planting of vegetation to slow up the eroding process. This second method is known as a step farming and consists of planting some forage crop between fields that are freshly cultivated. By so doing the force of the water is broken as it travels across the cultivated field into the hay field and then into the next cultivated patch."

Miss Riddell, in her modelling demonstration, told the audience that "a well groomed man or woman announces by his or her dress, something of his true character."

"No person should dress to create attraction. Dress should be the frame or background for the individual so that it will bring out the best that is in a person."

"There are three points to remember in dress: It shall not contradict the natural lines of the person; it shall be in proportion to the build of the person; and it shall reasonably indicate the character or personality of the wearer."

"For youth simplicity should be the mode, while for older persons designs are in order."

In her modelling Miss Riddell demonstrated that the accessories play a very important part in the woman's dress. She demonstrated how one ensemble, with minor changes to belts, use of jackets, addition of bracelet and change in hand bags, change of color of accessories, use of sweater, different blouses, and different hats, could completely change the appearance of the ensemble in twenty different ways.

"Clothes should give women poise and balance, and we should be able to forget all about our dress when we go out," Miss Riddell informed the women.

One feature of the afternoon session was a demonstration on canning by 4-H Club members of Bucks County, under the direction of Miss Edna Stephany, Home Economics Extension Representative of Bucks County. The demonstration was held in the Gymnasium, as was also the evening program.

A puppet show, "Two Boys in Disguise," was presented by Miss Bertha Lawrence of the Philadelphia Dairy Council.

Exhibits of farm products, which were on display in the gymnasium were from many different sections. The St. Francis Industrial School had a large and attractive display of Fall harvest crops and vegetables. Others who had exhibits included: Comly Bros.; S. H. Starkey; H. N. Dudley & Sons; Yeagle Bros.; Morrellton Farms; T. F. Biddle; E. Shoemaker; Morrow Bros.; Pugliese; Starkey Farms; and G. D. Alberger.

Other exhibits included: an exhibit of leather articles by Andalusia Cub Pack 1, Cubmaster, Joseph Kish; an exhibit of toys by troop 2, St. Francis, Scoutmaster, H. A. Behm; a display of woodwork, Troop 1, St. Francis, Scoutmaster, Joseph Mehan; a display of farms as commonly laid out and then the farm as it should be laid out to prevent soil erosion.

Different kinds of mechanical aids to prevent erosion were also shown in small models. They included brush fill, corn fodder gully fill, wire dam, brush dam, sod bag dam, loose stone dam, log dam, dry wall dam, masonry dam, and also extra drilling of grain in depression as well as sod waterway left in depression. The last two displayed were types of vegetation preventive methods.

D. G. Hopkins, in charge of the Morrellton Farms, and a leading figure in the preparation of the program, thanked the audience for their attendance. He also announced that next year the committee hopes to be able to give ribbons for prizes in the exhibits.

The committee for the affair included: Mr. and Mrs. S. Q. Becker, Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Bonner, Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Dudley, Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Hopkins, and Mr. and Mrs. William White.

Preceding the evening session a delightful and refreshing supper was served free to all of the persons in attendance.

Another Lenglen

By BURNLEY

Net experts who watched the flashing Senorita Anita Lizana capture the U. S. national tennis crown early this month agreed that the comet of Chile is the nearest thing to Suzanne Lenglen the game has yet seen.

Colorful, high-strung, graceful and with a penchant for making daring shots, Senorita Lizana resembles the immortal Suzanne both in style and temperament. Walking to the Forest Hills clubhouse after an apparently easy win in the championship finals, the emotional Chilean fainted dead away, overcome by the excitement and the plaudits of the crowd.

The present holder of the American title is thus seen to be the exact opposite of such phlegmatic affectors of the poker face as Helen Jacobs and Mrs. Moody.

As for her game, the graceful Anita's strategy and crisp shots were a joy to behold as she routed Jadwiga Jedzejowska, the touted Polish slugger. The speedy little Chilean miss is due for the top-ranking post in women's tennis, with Dorothy Round apparently through with the game.

Our own Alice Marble appears to have gone back. Dorothy Bundy is still too young. Now it seems that Helen Wills Moody will try a comeback in 1938, but she'll need more than an awe-inspiring reputation to turn back the flashing Senorita from South America.
